

A new Coronavirus-themed phishing campaign named “King Engine” uses the COVID-19 scare to compromise the victim’s device. Attackers are sending emails that contain the recipient’s Coronavirus test result in an attachment, which is just a lure to convince the victim to open the attachment.