Your Questions answered

Is someone living with dementia more likely to catch corona virus?

It can be that due to the cognitive impact of dementia the person may struggle with the guidance around the virus. This guidance includes hand washing and socially distancing.

This may mean that some people living with dementia have more risk to becoming infected.

Added to this if the person with dementia has professional carers to support them this may improve their risk as the carers interact with others. This risk will be decreased by the professional carers wearing masks, gloves and aprons.

If you have any other questions regarding supporting people living with dementia through the pandemic, please contact me so I can help share best practice between different areas of the city.

Passing the time

I understand that many of the people you support will suddenly have lots of time on their hands so in this section I will share different ways to pass the time.
