<td>Consumer policy</td>
<td>Ageing well: health and prevention We must all be supported to live and age well, this means addressing the causes of poor health and embedding a culture of prevention in public services and policy. Health and care services must recognise the impact of both physical and mental health in maintaining our wellbeing.</td>
<td>Adult safeguarding The abuse and neglect of older people remains a largely hidden issue, which leaves hundreds of thousands of older people experiencing, or at risk of, avoidable harm.</td>
<td>Age-friendly communities Everybody should be able to live in an age-friendly environment, that enables people of all ages to lead independent and fulfilling lives.</td>
<td>Digital inclusion Older people should be supported and encouraged to get online but those who cannot or do not want to do so should continue to be able to access services and support in a way suits them.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Consumer vulnerability</td>
<td>Carers Carers must not be expected to sacrifice their health and quality of life. Society should recognise carers’ contribution, and ensure that they are supported to be able to live fulfilling lives whilst continuing in their caring role.</td>
<td>Care homes Care home residents must be able to maintain their personal identity and contact with family and community, and be protected against abuse, poor care and breaches of their consumer rights.</td>
<td>Crime and scams Nobody should live in fear of crime. Police, Government and industry action should prevent crimes targeted at older people, including scams, and support victims.</td>
<td>Employment Older people who want to work must have the opportunity to do so. Someone’s age alone should play no part in judging whether they are capable or able to do any job.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Financial inclusion</td>
<td>Improving healthcare Older people must be able to access health services that do not discriminate and that are equipped to provide safe, high quality care that’s right for them.</td>
<td>Digital Assistive Technology Older people should be able to choose well designed digital care and support which helps them better manage their independence, dignity and wellbeing.</td>
<td>Energy Everyone should be able to live in a warm, energy efficient home and the energy market should work in the interests of consumers.</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ageism and age equality</td>
<td>Human rights Human rights standards provide vital protection for older people by helping to change practice and procedure, culture and attitudes, and offering redress when breaches of human rights have taken place.</td>
<td>Government at all levels should take a strategic approach to making the UK a great place to grow older where everyone is able to have a say in decisions that affect their lives.</td>
<td>Housing and homes In reshaping public services, Government at all levels should take account of the needs of an ageing population.</td>
<td>Active communities All older people should have choice and control over their own lives, with easy access to the information and advice they need to make that happen.</td>

Financial entitlements
The benefit and welfare systems should ensure an adequate income for people in retirement and for younger people who are unable to work for reasons such as disability or caring responsibilities. Benefits designed to boost income for those in work should ensure that work pays.

Private Pensions/State Pensions/Poverty and financial disadvantage
All current and future pensioners should have enough money from state and private sources to live comfortably and participate fully in society.

Taxation
The tax system should be fair; demands must be affordable but the taxation system should also ensure that people do not feel penalised for having saved.

Using housing wealth
Housing wealth can be a valuable means of financial provision in retirement but it is not available to all and it is not an alternative to an adequate pension income.

Living well with dementia
Every person with dementia should be supported to live well and to continue participating in society. They and their carers should have access to good-quality care and support from diagnosis to the end of life, wherever they live and whatever their background.

Loneliness
Older people should have the support and opportunity to make and maintain meaningful connections so that they can enjoy life as much as possible.

Mental capacity
People must be supported in making as many decisions for themselves as possible, and where they are unable to do so, decisions must be made in that person’s best interests.

Mental health
Older people must have fair and equal access to the services, support and opportunity to maintain good mental wellbeing. Older people must have confidence that their mental health needs are fully recognised and supported and seen as equally important as their physical health needs.

Social care assessment and eligibility
Older people must be able to expect full consideration of their individual care and support needs and access to services that will fully meet them.

Social care reform and funding
The social care system must be reformed to guarantee high-quality support for everyone who needs it and sufficiently funded to enable current and future generations of older people to lead fulfilling lives.

End of life care
Everyone has the right to expect services and support that help them to achieve a dignified and pain-free death, with choice in how they are cared for in their final months and days, regardless of where they live or their diagnosis.

Independence and personalisation
Older people should have choice and control over the support that they receive, so that it is tailored to their individual needs and preferences, and should be able to draw on a wide range of support which is not limited to traditional care services.

Housing design, adaptations and support
New and existing homes need to be adaptable to the changing needs of an ageing population to promote both independence and self-determination.

Older homelessness
No older person should find themselves homeless, either living in unsuitable temporary accommodation or sleeping rough on the streets.

Retirement housing
Older people should have access to a range of different retirement housing options that match their individual needs and aspirations.

Rural ageing
Older people should have the support they need to be able to thrive in the countryside or in towns. They should be able to access essential services and live active lives.

Local public transport/Older drivers
Wherever they live, older people should be able to reach key services, friends and family at reasonable cost, in reasonable time and with reasonable ease.

Volunteering and active citizenship
Everyone should have the opportunity to learn, join in, volunteer or work.

Learning and skills
Meaningful opportunities to learn for both work and pleasure should be available to people of all ages. Publicly and privately funded provision should be accessible to people regardless of their date of birth.

Our policy positions are an important part of our governance framework, as Age UK speaks on public policy issues affecting England and UK/GB on behalf of all partners, including local Age UKs and (for reserved matters) Age Cymru, Age Scotland and Age NI. Age UK’s policy positions are regularly reviewed and updated, with valuable input from the Policy Panel of local Age UKs and Policy Sounding Board of older people.
